TRANSPORT EMISSIONS CENTRAL TO CAPITAL'S TOXIC AIR

AS THE BLAME GAME OVER DELHI'S TOXIC AIR GOES ON, FE EXAMINES IF THE STICKY ISSUE HAS ANY QUICK FIXES IN A 2-PART SERIES

NITIN KUMAR & SANDIP DAS
New Delhi, December 8

BREATHABLE AIR CAN'T be a luxury for a countryside superpower.

But for the millions of inhabitants of the national capital region (NCR), and several other cities in the country, the toxicity of the air they breathe is something that they feel, experience and is very palpable.

They no longer need the daily nuggets of information about the rising Air Quality Index (AQI), the high PM2.5 level to appreciate the severity of the situation.

For the record, the NCR and adjoining areas invariably shift to a spell of "very poor" or "severe" air quality with intermittent falls to the "hazardous" category, ahead of the winter onset.

But the fact is during most parts of the year, except for certain short periods of heavy monsoon rains, Delhi's air remains abysmally poor. The authorities are reportedly going to get another study conducted to determine the

■ Delhi-NCR air remains worsening ahead of winter every year

■ Residents experience ever-pollution daily, beyond AQI numbers

■ Transport sector contributes most, forming critical mass of urban pollutants

■ EV adoption sluggish, only 7.5% of registrations achieved relative contribution of various air pollutants, but experts contend instead of a more accurate "source apportionment", quick, concrete action to curb the quantum of pollutants is what the city needs at this hour.

Transport sector's share in emissions is the highest, and serves as a sort of "critical mass" when it comes to accumulation of air pollutants. A situation similar to what NCR is now witnessing was experienced in Chinese cities like Beijing a couple of decades ago.

However, despite China being the world's largest auto producer and consumer, it has managed to reverse the air quality deterioration of its cities.

In multi-pronged strategy includes converting coal to achieving high fuel quality, installation of sophisticated terminal treatment facilities, and strict enforcement of emission standards.

In contrast, the NCR's planned transition into cleaner public transport and electric vehicles (EVs) to fight persistent air pollution is making only slow headway. Delays in awarding tenders by the Delhi state government and Convergence Energy Services (CESL), owned by a few power-sector PSUs, have slowed a proposed rollout of the large batch of EVs, sources said.

Though the Delhi government has finalised plans to procure 5,000 new buses, none has hit the roads yet. "Deliveries are now expected to start only by March 2026, and full deployment may take several years", an official source told FE, on condition of anonymity. The slowdown is despite the fact that the city needs at least 11,000-12,000 buses to provide reliable and high-frequency public transport coverage.

"Unlike episodic events such as farm fires or festivals, transport emissions persist throughout the year and are steadily increasing. This is why cities are increasingly feeling the burden of transport-related pollution. The solution lies in promoting walking, cycling, and zero-emission vehicles such as electric mobility," Amit Bhatt, managing director-India, International Council on Clean Transportation (ICCT), told FE.

According to a Centre for Science and Environment (CSE) study last year, an estimated 1.1 million vehicles enter and exit Delhi daily, worsening the air quality. A high-level task force on air quality has stated that Delhi holds more than half of all vehicles in the NCR and 37% of vehicles in Delhi-NCR still belong to the outdated BS-I to BS-III emission norms.

Experts said that replacing the city's entire existing bus fleet with new electric buses could cut total pollutant emissions by nearly 7.5%, offering one of Delhi's most effective tools for reducing ambient pollution levels.

As of September 2025, Delhi operates 5,267 public buses, including 2,917 e-buses — with 2,917 under the Delhi Transport Corporation and 839 under the Delhi Integrated Multi-Modal Transit System clusters. Transport planners have repeatedly warned that the city needs at least 11,000-12,000 buses to provide reliable and high-frequency public transport coverage.

"Unlike episodic events such as farm fires or festivals, transport emissions persist throughout the year and are steadily increasing. This is why cities are increasingly feeling the burden of transport-related pollution. The solution lies in promoting walking, cycling, and zero-emission vehicles such as electric mobility," Amit Bhatt, managing director-India, International Council on Clean Transportation (ICCT), told FE.

According to a Centre for Science and Environment (CSE) study last year, an estimated 1.1 million vehicles enter and exit Delhi daily, worsening the air quality. A high-level task force on air quality has stated that Delhi holds more than half of all vehicles in the NCR and 37% of vehicles in Delhi-NCR still Around 3,400 EV buses are currently on city roads, and the environment ministry aims to increase the fleet to over 5,000 by March 2026.

But Delhi's larger electric mobility story is also altering. Despite aggressive policy direction, the adoption of electric cars remains sluggish: e-cars account for under 7.5% of new registrations in 2025, far from the levels needed to meaningfully curb the city's vehicular emissions.

The draft Delhi EV Policy 2.0 has laid out even more ambitious goals—95% EV penetration in new registrations by 2027 and 98% by 2030. However, a reality check suggests that Delhi is already struggling. The previous policy, which targeted 25% EV penetration by 2024, achieved only 13-14%, revealing a significant implementation gap.

"More worrying is the daily synchronised rise of PM2.5 (particulate matter) and other toxic gases of nitrogen dioxide (NO2) and carbon monoxide (CO) largely from vehicles and combustion sources, creating a toxic cocktail that has gone unnoticed," Anumita Roychowdhury, executive director, CSE said. "Yet, every winter, pollution control efforts are dominated by the dust control measures, which has no action on vehicles, industry, waste and solid fuel burning," Roychowdhury said while adding that Delhi and NCR cannot hide behind the smokescreen of winter weather.

The environment ministry has acknowledged that stubble burning remains an endemic yet significant contributor to winter pollution. Delhi-NCR, alongside vehicular emissions, industrial pollution, waste burning, construction dust, landfill fires, and weather patterns during early winter months.

BROADCASTER JIOSTAR'S GOOGLY to ICC just two months ahead of the men's T20 World Cup is a wake-up call for the country's cricket ecosystem, say experts.

While cricket still contributes the lion's share to India's sports advertising revenue—85% of the total sports advertising revenue of around ₹16,633 crore in 2024 — a 2025 Nielsen report showed that cricket's popularity among Indian youth (18-30) has dipped between 2019 and 2023, with younger fans exploring sports like basketball, basketball and MMA.

Prashant Jogekar, founder of SportsBiznet, said: "Cricket has officially hit its peak and the hype cycle is ending. It is a cause for concern when broadcasters saying that they can no longer justify the economics of the media rights. When broadcasters start exiting, it means valuation has peaked," he observed.

JioStar had closed the IPL 2025 season with ad revenues between ₹4,800 crore and ₹4,900 crore.

It is expected to generate ₹6,000-7,000 crore in ad revenue for 2026.

BROADCAST CRISIS

■ JioStar's ICC exit signals cricket broadcasting valuations have peaked

■ Cricket contributes 85% of India's sports advertising

■ Nielsen reports youth shifting interest towards basketball, MMA

That said, "huge reach does not guarantee conversion. Without conversion, the entire revenue model collapses," added Jogekar.

While the broadcaster's troubles have been compounded by the ban on real money gaming, resulting in a loss of ad revenues at around ₹7,000 crore, observers say these events might also lead to IPL rights in the 2027 cycle to plateau or fall, unless other players begin to bid aggressively. JioStar's U-turn has forced the ICC to initiate a new bidding process for the 2026-2029 media rights at approximately $2.4 billion. With the cost prohibitively high, platforms like Netflix and Prime Video have been lukewarm in their response.

While industry insiders say JioStar will most likely be compelled to deliver broadcasting until 2027, some believe that the broadcaster will try to bring down the deal's pricing by at least 30%. The muted interest from other players will likely work in JioStar's favour.

All this will force a reset of the cricket ecosystem. For instance, we have recently seen JioStar tie up with Nielsen to address advertiser concerns and ensure better transparency in advertising reach.

At New Jersey, MD India for Brand Finance, said a bigger question for JioStar is around strengthening its content strategy. "With Netflix, it's expected Warner Bros' content, JioStar's biggest trump card is the Indian Premier League. However, the IPL only lasts for two months a year, while ICC rights will mean the broadcaster gets cricketing content all year round," said Francis.

Sharp concentration risk for MSMEs due to over leveraged borrowers: Report

LENDERS ARE STARING at a "sharp concentration risk" in the micro, small and medium enterprises portfolios, with over half of the outstanding borrowers having three or more loans, a credit information company said on Monday.

Crif High Mark said 22% of the MSME outstandings by value are to entities having 3-5 loans, while those with more than five loans constitute another 30% to the books as of September 2025.

"Borrowers with 6-10 and 10+ loans together account for nearly 30% of exposure, though they represent only 1.6% of borrowers, underscoring sharp concentration risk," the company said in a report.

"In effect, a small segment of highly leveraged borrowers dominates overall credit exposure, driving both portfolio growth and risk concentration," it added.

The Crif report also said there is a "silver lining" on the MSME portfolios front, saying 83.6% of the borrowers by numbers have a single loan and a significant number of them have borrowed in the last one year.

In the past few months, concerns over risks in the MSME portfolios have been voiced in some quarters, even as banks continue to expand in the segment. PTI
